2010 National Teacher of the Year

Attachments: None

Recommendation: It is recommended that the State Board hear and discuss this information.

Background: Wessling is a 10th through 12th grade English teacher at Johnston High School in Johnston, Iowa. In April 2010, she was selected as the 60th National Teacher of the Year. Wessling is passionate about education in the 21st century. In her classroom, she finds a balance between problem solving and critical thinking skills and teaching traditional content by stepping far outside the five paragraph essay and into the world of surveys, songs, film storyboards, Facebook pages, and a yearly grant project in which the whole town gets involved. She says, “Students construct knowledge when it is relevant to them and when they have a real authentic purpose.”

This year, Sarah has been devoting herself full-time to being a national and international spokesperson for education. She will speak with the State Board about her experiences as National Teacher of the Year.
