Youth Are Guaranteed Seamless Transitions Between Schools and School Districts When School Moves Occur

When youth must move between schools, they often have trouble enrolling. Delays can lead them to miss important classroom time. Transitions in the middle of the year can make it harder for youth to access academic and extracurricular programs.

What you can do:

✔ Ensure the child is enrolled in the new school.
  Title IV-E requires states to immediately and appropriately enroll all foster youth in care in the new school when they move. Under the McKinney-Vento Act, youth “awaiting foster care placement” are entitled to enroll immediately in a new school even if they are missing required records (such as immunization records). They are also entitled to have a school liaison help them with enrollment and other issues. To figure out whether a child is covered by this law, find out how your state defines “awaiting foster care placement.” In some state, this law covers all or most youth in care. Additionally, in many states, schools must enroll children within a set time period, e.g., within five days of the request.

✔ Help with school record transfers.
  Many states require the prompt transfer of records between schools. Title IV-E now requires the child welfare agency to ensure the child’s education records are provided to the new school.

✔ Take the lead in enrolling the child.
  As a caseworker with care and custody of children in out-of-home care you can be the key person to bring the child to the school to enroll. A foster parent may also be able to take this responsibility, but you must clarify with the school and foster parent exactly what paperwork and information is needed for enrollment.

Resources:

Defining “awaiting foster care placement”: To identify how “awaiting foster care placement” is defined in your state or locality, review The McKinney-Vento Act and Children and Youth Awaiting Foster Care Placement: Improving Educational Outcomes through School Stability. (Available at www.abanet.org/child/education/home.shtml)

State rights:
Find out about your state enrollment entitlements and other state rights by looking at the State School Stability Legislation Chart. (Available at www.abanet.org/child/education/home.shtml)

New Title IV-E Provisions:
Learn about new provisions to Title IV-E of the Social Security Act that focus on school enrollment. Check for new publications at the Legal Center Web site.

This information is adapted from the Blueprint for Change: Educational Success for Children in Foster Care, published by the Legal Center for Foster Care & Education. To see the full publication, search a database on foster care education issues, and learn more federal and local law, go to www.abanet.org/child/education.